Their Failure in Renewing Expected Offensive Not Due to Voluntary Action.

IS MUCH SPECULATION
Failure of the Enemy to React Against Allies Is Not Yet Clear to Entente.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The conviction is gaining ground that the Germans have encountered serious obstacles in renewing and pressing their offensive on the Western front. It is not believed that the Germans have voluntarily deferred making the much expected attack. Secretary Baker this morning when questioned by newspaper men declared that he knew of no clear reasons for the delay on the part of the Germans in renewing their attack. The failure of the enemy to react against the repeated and successful attacks and raids of the Allies is accepted as evidence that the German offensive is being held in check by some consideration other than preparation of their forces.

VON HINDENBURG DIES AFTER ROW WITH THE KAISER

Stroke of Apoplexy Follows Violent Quarrel with His Emperor Says Report Today.

AMSTERDAM ADVICES
Is Claimed That General and Kaiser Disagreed About German Offensive Plans.

AMSTERDAM, July 13.—Following a violent interview with the Kaiser, marked by serious differences of opinion, relating to the German offensive, Gen. von Hindenburg, chief of staff of the German Army, died from an apoplectic stroke.

This information is according to the newspaper Les Nouvelles. The information is said to have been received from good sources from a German occupied district in Belgium.

There had been many rumors for the past six months regarding Hindenburg's death. These rumors also indicated disagreements between Hindenburg and Kaiser.

Gen. von Hindenburg has been Chief of Staff of the German army since August 30, 1916. He had been worshipped by the German people as the greatest military genius of the age, following his successful operations against the Russian offensive on the eastern front. As a boy he had hunted and explored the marshes of eastern Prussia, and his knowledge was put to a practical use by taking an army through the maze of marshes and attacking the Russians on their flank from an unexpected quarter. In a series of brilliant offensives, he drove the Russians from East Prussia, Galicia, Poland and western Russian provinces, and his invading armies even threatened Petrograd and Moscow for a time.

He was the master behind the scenes in the drive against the Italians last Fall, and personally visited the field during the operations. He launched the great western drives this Spring, and his word was considered supreme in military circles. It is reported of him that he did not hesitate even to rebuke the Royal Princes on occasion, and exercised an arbitrary independence of opinion which the Kaiser forced others to accept. The press, political and military leaders of Germany have characterized him as the bulwark of the German war machine, and all depended upon him to bring victory to their army.
